CONTENTS

Editors' introductory remarks ix

Archaeological foreword: Cognitive archaeology and the prehistory of mind x
Trevor Watkins

Psychological foreword: Cognitive archaeology – beyond just-so stories and WEIRD psychology xix
Valerie E. Stone

Acknowledgements xxvi

List of contributors xxix

PART I
Prehistory from the perspective of physiological and developmental psychology 1

1 Introduction: what would Wundt think? 3
Edward P. Kardas and Tracy B. Henley

2 Before, after, and alongside the excavation: how to think about the evolution and history of physiology and development 19
Melvin Konner

3 Life history evolution in hominins 36
Jon Oxford and David C. Geary

4 Evolution of hormonal mechanisms for human family relationships 58
Heather Habecker and Mark V. Flinn

5 The evolution and development of morality 86
Dennis L. Krebs

6 In search of baselines: why psychology needs cognitive archaeology 104
Darcia Narvaez

7 Play: a neglected factor in ritual, religion, and human evolution 120
Gordon M. Burghardt

PART II
Prehistory from the perspective of cognitive psychology 135

8 The origins of generativity 137
Michael C. Corballis

9 Three stages in the evolution of human cognition: normativity, recursion, and abstraction 153
Ceri Shipton

10 The evolution of learning and memory in humans: comparative perspectives on testing adaptive hypotheses 174
Mark A. Krause and Crickette Sanz

11 Reconfiguring Natural Semantic Metalanguage for a deep cognitive archaeology 196
Horacio Fabrega, Jr.

12 Exploring the psychological basis for transitions in the archaeological record 220
Liane Gabora and Cameron M. Smith

13 The cognitive mechanisms deriving from the Acheulean handaxe that gave rise to symmetry, form, and pattern perception 241
Derek Hodgson

14 The role of expert technical cognition in human evolution 261
Thomas Wynn and Frederick L. Coolidge

PART III
Prehistory from the perspective of social psychology 285

15 Key cognitive preconditions for the evolution of language 287
Merlin Donald

16 The human social mind and the inextricability of science and religion 296
Mark Nielsen

17 Markers of "psycho-cultural" change: the early-Neolithic monuments of Göbekli Tepe in southeastern Turkey 311
Oliver Dietrich, Jens Notroff, Sebastian Walter, and Laura Dietrich

18 How ritual made us human 333
Matt J. Rossano

19 The role of egalitarianism and gender ritual in the evolution of symbolic cognition 354
Camilla Power

20 Norms and their evolution 375
Kim Sterelny

21 Power, play, and interplay: the psychology of prehistoric sexuality 398
Timothy Taylor

PART IV
Prehistory from the perspective of personality and clinical psychology 413

22 Domestic fire, domestic selves: how keeping fire facilitated the evolution of emotions and emotion regulation 415
Terrence Twomey

23 Psychology in archaeology: the secret society case 431
Brian Hayden

24 The archaeology of madness 451
David S. Whitley

25 The prehistory of psychoactive drug use 471
Edward H. Hagen and Shannon Tushingham

26 The lure of death: suicide and human evolution 499
Nicholas Humphrey

27 From corpse to symbol: proposed cognitive grades over the long-term evolution of hominin mortuary activity 512
Paul Pettitt

28 Afterword: psychology and archaeology – the past's long reach 526
Matt J. Rossano, Tracy B. Henley, and Edward P. Kardas

Index 535